Identification and Authorization

Accurate identification of the deceased is the first critical step. The society requires proper legal authorization forms signed by the next of kin or legal representative before proceeding with cremation.

Preparation for Cremation

The deceased is prepared for cremation, including the removal of any medical devices or prosthetics. The body is then placed in a combustible container suitable for the cremation chamber.

The Cremation Procedure

Cremation takes place in a specialized retort, where high temperatures reduce the body to bone fragments. This process typically lasts between one and three hours, depending on various factors such as body size and equipment used.

Processing and Return of Cremated Remains

After cremation, bone fragments are processed into a fine ash-like consistency. The cremated remains are then placed in an urn selected by the family or provided by the Cremation Society of Illinois. The remains can be kept, buried, or scattered according to the family's wishes.

cremation society of illinois: Lived Religion in America David D. Hall, 2020-09-01 At once historically and theoretically informed, these essays invite the reader to think of religion dynamically, reconsidering American religious history in terms of practices that are linked to specific social contexts. The point of departure is the concept of lived religion. Discussing such topics as gift exchange, cremation, hymn-singing, and women's spirituality, a group of leading sociologists and historians of religion explore the many facets of how people carry out their religious beliefs on a daily basis. As David Hall notes in his introduction, a history of practices encompasses the tensions, the ongoing struggle of definition, that are constituted within every religious tradition and that are always present in how people choose to act. Practice thus suggests that any synthesis is provisional. The volume opens with two essays by Robert Orsi and Danièle Hervieu-Léger that offer an overview of the rapidly growing study of lived religion, with Hervieu-Léger using the Catholic charismatic renewal movement in France as a window through which to explore the coexistence of regulation and spontaneity within religious practice. Anne S. Brown and David D. Hall examine family strategies and church membership in early New England. Leigh Eric Schmidt looks at the complex meanings of gift-giving in America. Stephen Prothero writes about the cremation movement in the late nineteenth century. In an essay on the narrative structure of Mrs. Cowman's Streams in the Desert, Cheryl Forbes considers the devotional lives of everyday women. Michael McNally uses the practice of hymn-singing among the Ojibwa to reexamine the categories of native and Christian religion. In essays centering on domestic life, Rebecca Kneale Gould investigates modern homesteading as lived religion while R. Marie Griffith treats home-oriented spirituality in the Women's Aglow Fellowship. In Golden-Rule Christianity, Nancy Ammerman talks about lived religion in the American mainstream.
