Question: A police officer stops a vehicle for a traffic violation. During the stop, the officer smells marijuana and searches the car without a warrant. Which constitutional amendment is primarily implicated in determining the legality of the search?

Answer Choices:

- A. Fourth Amendment
- B. Fifth Amendment
- C. Sixth Amendment
- D. Fourteenth Amendment

Explanation: The Fourth Amendment protects against unreasonable searches and seizures. The officer's warrantless search must fall under a recognized exception to the warrant requirement to be lawful. Therefore, the correct answer is A.

2.

Question: During a custodial interrogation, a suspect invokes the right to remain silent. The police immediately cease questioning. Later, the suspect voluntarily initiates further communication. Can the police resume questioning?

Answer Choices:

- A. No, the right to remain silent cannot be waived once invoked.
- B. Yes, if the suspect initiates communication and waives the right knowingly.
- C. No, police must obtain a new Miranda warning before resuming questioning.
- D. Yes, without any additional requirements.

Explanation: Under Miranda rules, if a suspect invokes the right to remain silent, police must cease questioning. However, if the suspect later initiates communication and knowingly waives the right, police may resume questioning. Hence, B is correct.

3.

Question: A defendant moves to suppress evidence obtained during an unlawful search. Which legal doctrine allows the court to exclude this evidence from trial?

Answer Choices:

- A. Fruit of the Poisonous Tree
- B. Double Jeopardy
