About the Frankford Community Development Corporation

The Frankford Community Development Corporation is a nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting economic development and community revitalization in the Frankford neighborhood. Established with the goal of addressing urban challenges, the CDC focuses on fostering inclusive growth that benefits residents, businesses, and institutions. Its core mission revolves around improving housing conditions, supporting local entrepreneurs, and enhancing public spaces. The organization operates through a combination of grant funding, public-private partnerships, and community-driven strategies to achieve sustainable outcomes.

Mission and Vision

The mission of the Frankford Community Development Corporation is to cultivate a vibrant, economically stable, and culturally rich community. The vision encompasses a neighborhood where residents have access to affordable housing, quality education, and employment opportunities. The CDC strives to serve as a catalyst for positive change by implementing programs that align with these goals and nurture community pride.

Organizational Structure

The CDC is governed by a board of directors composed of local leaders, business owners, and community activists. This structure ensures that decision-making reflects the diverse interests of the Frankford community. Staff members include project managers, community outreach coordinators, and economic development specialists who work collaboratively to execute the organization's initiatives effectively.

Key Programs and Initiatives

The Frankford Community Development Corporation administers a variety of programs designed to address critical community needs. These initiatives range from housing rehabilitation to small business support and workforce development. Each program is tailored to create measurable improvements in the neighborhood's economic and social landscape.

Affordable Housing Development

One of the CDC's primary focuses is increasing the availability of affordable housing in Frankford. Through partnerships with local developers and government agencies, the organization facilitates the construction and renovation of residential units that meet affordability criteria. Efforts include securing funding for low-income housing tax credits and coordinating tenant support services.

Small Business Support and Entrepreneurship

The CDC actively supports local entrepreneurs by providing access to capital, business training, and technical assistance. These programs aim to stimulate economic growth by nurturing small businesses, which are essential to the community's economic vitality. Workshops on marketing, financial management, and regulatory compliance are regularly offered to empower business owners.

Community Engagement and Public Space Improvement

Engaging residents in community development processes is a cornerstone of the CDC's strategy. The organization hosts forums, neighborhood clean-ups, and cultural events to build social cohesion. Additionally, it spearheads efforts to enhance public spaces such as parks, streetscapes, and community centers, thereby improving the overall livability of the area.

Impact on the Frankford Community

The Frankford Community Development Corporation has made significant strides in transforming the neighborhood into a more prosperous and inclusive environment. Through its comprehensive programs, the CDC has contributed to measurable improvements in housing quality, business growth, and resident engagement.

Housing and Neighborhood Revitalization

Since its inception, the CDC has facilitated the rehabilitation of numerous housing units, reducing vacancy rates and improving living conditions. These efforts have helped stabilize property values and attracted new residents. Neighborhood revitalization projects have also enhanced safety and aesthetic appeal, which positively influences community morale.

Economic Growth and Job Creation

By supporting small businesses and fostering entrepreneurship, the CDC has helped create local employment opportunities. Economic programs have led to increased business revenues and diversification of the local economy. This growth is critical for sustaining long-term development and reducing poverty within the community.

Strengthening Community Ties

The CDC's emphasis on community engagement has fostered stronger relationships among residents, businesses, and civic organizations. Enhanced social networks contribute to a more resilient community capable of addressing challenges collaboratively. Public events and participatory planning initiatives have promoted a sense of ownership and pride in Frankford's future.

Partnerships and Collaborations

The success of the Frankford Community Development Corporation is largely attributable to its strategic partnerships with various stakeholders. Collaborations with governmental agencies, nonprofit organizations, and private sector entities amplify the CDC's capacity to deliver impactful programs.

Government Agencies

The CDC works closely with city and state government departments to access funding, align with public policies, and implement community development plans. These partnerships enable the CDC to leverage resources for affordable housing, infrastructure improvements, and social services.

Nonprofit and Community Organizations

Collaborating with other nonprofits allows the CDC to address a broad range of social issues. Partnerships with organizations specializing in education, health, and youth services create comprehensive support systems for residents. Joint initiatives often focus on holistic community advancement.

Private Sector Engagement

Engagement with local businesses and financial institutions provides vital support for economic development. The CDC facilitates connections between entrepreneurs and investors, promotes local procurement, and encourages corporate social responsibility efforts that benefit Frankford.

Opportunities for Community Involvement

The Frankford Community Development Corporation encourages active participation from residents and stakeholders to ensure that development efforts reflect community needs and aspirations. Various avenues are available for individuals and groups to contribute to the CDC's mission.

Volunteer Programs

Volunteering offers a direct way for community members to support initiatives such as neighborhood clean-ups, event organization, and outreach campaigns. Volunteers play a critical role in implementing programs and fostering community spirit.

Board and Committee Membership

Individuals with expertise or a vested interest in community development can join the CDC's board or advisory committees. These roles provide opportunities to influence decision-making and guide strategic planning.

Community Feedback and Participation

The CDC regularly solicits input from residents through surveys, public meetings, and focus groups. Active participation in these feedback mechanisms ensures that programs remain responsive and effective.

frankford community development corporation: It Takes a Neighborhood David J. Wright, 2002-01-03 The Neighborhood Preservation Initiative, a comprehensive community building program in ten neighborhoods from nine mostly mid-sized cities, is examined in It Takes a Neighborhood. Wright shows what was learned through NPI about the value of focusing on working-class neighborhoods, as well as how to think about and structure community building efforts generally. The lessons gained from NPI about engaging established, networked community organizations in deliberate action-oriented strategies, fueled by flexible funding, and linked to systems of local support, are shown to be applicable to a wide spectrum of community building initiatives. The Pew Charitable Trusts created the NPI, targeting it toward working-class neighborhoods threatened but not yet affected deeply by decline, a significant departure from previous community development efforts. The neighborhoods possessed important assets such as strong community organizations, talented volunteers, and neighborhood strategies that could be capitalized upon, neighborhood strengths that could be reinforced through relatively small investments as a way to prevent decline. Along with generating attention to working-class neighborhoods and public policy on their behalf, the goal of NPI was to help residents to improve their quality of life and learn how to sustain long-term community stability and vitality.

frankford community development corporation: The Effects of Incarceration and Reentry on Community Health and Well-Being National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Health and Medicine Division, Board on Population Health and Public Health Practice, Roundtable on the Promotion of Health Equity, 2020-03-17 The high rate of incarceration in the United States contributes significantly to the nation's health inequities, extending beyond those who are imprisoned to families, communities, and the entire society. Since the 1970s, there has been a seven-fold increase in incarceration. This increase and the effects of the post-incarceration reentry disproportionately affect low-income families and communities of color. It is critical to examine the criminal justice system through a new lens and explore opportunities for meaningful improvements that will promote health equity in the United States. The National Academies convened a workshop on June 6, 2018 to investigate the connection between incarceration and health inequities to better understand the distributive impact of incarceration on low-income families and communities of color. Topics of discussion focused on the experience of incarceration and reentry, mass incarceration as a public health issue, women's health in jails and prisons, the effects of reentry on the individual and the community, and promising practices and models for reentry. The programs and models that are described in this publication are all Philadelphia-based because Philadelphia has one of the highest rates of incarceration of any major American city. This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions of the workshop.

frankford community development corporation: Business Improvement Districts Goktug Morcol, Lorlene Hoyt, Jack W. Meek, Ulf Zimmermann, 2017-09-29 Initiated and governed by property or business owners under the authorization of state and local governments, business improvement districts (BIDs) have received a very mixed reception. To some, they are innovative examples of self-governance and public-private partnerships; to others, they are yet another example of the movement toward the privatization of what should be inherent government responsibilities. Among the first books to present a collection of scholarly work on the subject, Business Improvement Districts: Research, Theories, and Controversies brings together renowned leaders in the field to compile the highest-quality theoretical, legal, and empirical studies into one comprehensive volume. Investigating fundamental concerns at the core of the debate, as well as potential solutions, this groundbreaking resource: Tackles the need for improved problem solving and efficiency in service delivery Examines new and innovative policy tools for both the public and private sectors Evaluates whether BIDs do ignore the needs and voices of residential property owners Discusses the challenge created by social segregation in cities Addresses lack of accountability by BIDs to the public and elected representatives From different perspectives, leading practitioners and academics analyze the pros and cons of BIDs both in the United States and around the world. They look at their impact on urban planning and retail revitalization, consider their legal implications, and explore ways to measure BID performance. Filled with case studies of urban centers including San Diego, Atlanta, New York, Toronto, and Capetown, and state models such as New Jersey and Pennsylvania, this examination bring together essential information for researchers as well as those leaders and policy makers looking to adopt a BID model or improve one already in place.
