The Posner Center for International Development is a nonprofit organization established to facilitate collaboration among development professionals and organizations. It provides a shared workspace and a vibrant community designed to accelerate progress in addressing global issues such as poverty, health, education, and environmental sustainability. The center's strategic location in Boulder allows it to attract a diverse range of stakeholders, from startups and nonprofits to academic institutions and governmental agencies. Its mission centers on empowering organizations working in international development by providing access to resources, networking opportunities, and innovative solutions. Through its multidisciplinary approach, the Posner Center fosters an environment conducive to knowledge exchange and project collaboration, enhancing the effectiveness and reach of development initiatives worldwide.

History and Establishment

The Posner Center for International Development was founded with the vision to create a centralized location where like-minded professionals could share ideas and resources. Since its inception, it has grown into a thriving community that supports over 50 organizations, ranging from small startups to well-established NGOs. The center was named after a key benefactor who contributed significantly to its establishment, emphasizing the importance of philanthropy in global development efforts.

Mission and Vision

The core mission of the Posner Center is to accelerate international development impact by fostering collaboration and innovation. It envisions a world where barriers between sectors and disciplines are minimized, enabling more effective solutions to complex global issues. This vision drives all of the center's initiatives and programs, positioning it as a leader in supporting sustainable development goals (SDGs).

Collaborative Environment and Community

The Posner Center for International Development is designed to cultivate a collaborative community where professionals from various sectors can engage in meaningful partnerships. The center offers a range of facilities including co-working spaces, meeting rooms, and event venues that encourage interaction and cooperation. This environment promotes cross-sector collaboration, which is critical for addressing multifaceted development challenges effectively.

Diverse Membership Base

The center hosts a diverse array of organizations, including nonprofits, social enterprises, academic institutions, and private sector companies. This diversity enriches the community by bringing together different perspectives, expertise, and resources. Members benefit from shared knowledge, networking opportunities, and joint ventures that enhance the overall impact of their work.

Community Engagement and Events

Regular events such as workshops, panel discussions, and networking sessions are integral to the Posner Center's community engagement strategy. These events provide members with platforms to share insights, showcase projects, and explore collaboration opportunities. The active community fosters a culture of continuous learning and innovation, enabling members to stay at the forefront of international development trends and best practices.

Programs and Resources Offered

The Posner Center for International Development provides a wide range of programs and resources tailored to support the growth and effectiveness of its member organizations. These offerings are designed to address the unique challenges faced by international development practitioners and to facilitate impactful outcomes.

Capacity Building and Training

The center offers capacity-building programs that equip organizations with essential skills in areas such as project management, monitoring and evaluation, fundraising, and communications. These training sessions are led by experts and are aimed at enhancing organizational effectiveness and sustainability.

Access to Funding and Partnerships

One of the key resources available at the Posner Center is assistance in securing funding and forming strategic partnerships. The center connects members with potential donors, grant opportunities, and corporate partners. This support is vital for scaling projects and increasing the reach of development programs.

Technology and Innovation Support

The Posner Center encourages the integration of technology and innovative solutions in development work. It provides access to technological resources, innovation labs, and expert consultations that help organizations leverage new tools for greater impact. This focus on innovation aligns with the center's goal of fostering sustainable and scalable development solutions.

Impact on Global Development Initiatives

The influence of the Posner Center for International Development extends beyond its physical location, contributing significantly to global development efforts. By enabling collaboration and resource sharing, the center enhances the capacity of organizations to implement effective programs in various sectors worldwide.

Supporting Sustainable Development Goals

The center's initiatives are closely aligned with the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Through its collaborative projects and programs, the Posner Center supports efforts in areas such as poverty alleviation, clean water and sanitation, quality education, gender equality, and climate action. Members' collective efforts contribute to measurable progress in these critical areas.

Case Studies of Successful Projects

Several member organizations have launched successful initiatives through resources and partnerships facilitated by the Posner Center. These include innovative health interventions, educational programs in underserved communities, and environmental conservation projects. Such case studies demonstrate the center's role in amplifying the effectiveness of international development work.

Strategic Partnerships and Networks

The Posner Center for International Development maintains strategic partnerships with a broad spectrum of stakeholders, enhancing its ability to support global development efforts. These partnerships extend to academic institutions, government agencies, philanthropic foundations, and private sector entities.

Collaborations with Academic Institutions

Partnerships with universities and research institutions enable the Posner Center to integrate cutting-edge research and academic expertise into its programs. These collaborations foster innovation and provide members with access to valuable data and analytical tools.

Engagement with Government and Philanthropy

The center works closely with governmental bodies and philanthropic organizations to align development efforts with policy frameworks and funding priorities. This engagement ensures that member organizations operate within supportive regulatory environments and have access to diverse funding streams.

Private Sector Involvement

Involving the private sector is a strategic priority for the Posner Center, recognizing the importance of corporate social responsibility and impact investing in international development. Partnerships with businesses facilitate resource mobilization and the application of market-based solutions to development challenges.

Future Prospects and Expansion

The Posner Center for International Development continues to evolve, with plans for expansion and enhanced programming to meet the growing needs of the international development community. Future prospects include scaling its collaborative model to new locations and increasing virtual engagement capabilities.

Expansion Plans

Expanding the physical footprint of the Posner Center is a key focus, aimed at accommodating more organizations and fostering broader regional collaboration. This expansion will enhance the center's capacity to serve as a global hub for development innovation.

Enhancing Digital Platforms

Recognizing the importance of digital connectivity, the Posner Center is investing in online platforms to facilitate remote collaboration and resource sharing. This will enable wider participation from international partners and help sustain momentum in global development efforts.

Strengthening Impact Measurement

Future initiatives will emphasize robust impact measurement and data-driven decision-making to ensure that programs supported by the Posner Center deliver tangible and scalable outcomes. This focus will enhance accountability and attract greater investment in international development projects.

- Shared co-working spaces and collaborative work environments
- Capacity building workshops and expert-led training sessions

posner center for international development: Citizen Aid and Everyday

Humanitarianism Anne Meike Fechter, Anke Schwittay, 2021-05-13 Citizen Aid and Everyday Humanitarianism brings together, under the umbrella terms of citizen aid and grassroots humanitarianism, interdisciplinary research on small-scale, privately-funded forms of aid that operate on the margins of the official development sector. The last decade has seen a steady rise of such activities in the Global South and North, such as in response to the influx of refugees into Europe. The chapters in this volume cover a variety of locations in Asia, Africa and Europe, presenting empirically grounded cases of citizen aid. They range from educational development projects, to post-disaster emergency relief. Importantly, while some activities are initiated by Northern citizens, others are based on South-South assistance, such as Bangladeshi nationals supporting Rohingya refugees, and peer support in the Philippines in the aftermath of typhoon Hayan. Together, the contributions consider citizen aid vis-à-vis more institutionalised forms of aid, review methodological approaches and their challenges and query the political dimensions of these initiatives. Key themes are historical perspectives on 'demotic humanitarianism', questions of legitimacy and professionalisation, founders' motivations, the role of personal connections, and the importance of digital media for brokerage and fundraising. Being mindful of the power imbalances inherent in citizen aid and everyday humanitarianism, they suggest that both deserve more systematic attention. Citizen Aid and Everyday Humanitarianism will be of great interest to scholars and professionals working in international development, humanitarianism, international aid and anthropology. The chapters were originally published as a special issue of Third World Quarterly.

posner center for international development: Resource Salvation Mark Gorgolewski, 2017-12-26 A valuable source of information, insight, and fresh ideas about a crucial aspect of the growing sustainable design movement Mounting resource shortages worldwide coupled with skyrocketing extraction costs for new materials have made the prospect of materials reuse and recycling an issue of paramount importance. A fundamental goal of the sustainable design movement is to derive utmost use from construction materials and components, including energy, water, materials, building components, whole structures, and even entire infrastructures. Written by an expert with many years of experience in both industry and academe, this book explores a wide range of sustainable design strategies which designers around the globe are using to create efficient and aesthetically pleasing buildings from waste streams and discarded items. Emphasizing performance issues, design considerations and process constraints, it describes numerous fully realized projects, and explores theoretical applications still on the drawing board. There is a growing awareness worldwide of the need for cyclical systems of materials reuse. Pioneering efforts at "closed-loop" design date as far back as 1960s, but only recently have architects and designers begun to focus on the opportunities which discarded materials can provide for creating high performance structures. A source of insight and fresh ideas for architects, engineers, and designers, Resource Salvation: Reviews the theory and practice of building material and waste reuse and describes best practices in that area worldwide Describes projects that use closed-loop thinking to influence and inspire the design of components, interiors, whole buildings, or urban landscapes Illustrates how using discarded materials and focusing on closed loops can lead to new concepts in architecture, building science, and urban design Demonstrates how designers have developed aesthetically compelling solutions to the demands of rigorous performance standards Resource Salvation is a source of information and inspiration for architects, civil engineers, green building professionals, building materials suppliers, landscape designers, urban designers, and government policymakers. It is certain to become required reading in university courses in sustainable architecture, as well as materials engineering and environmental engineering curricula with a sustainable design component.

posner center for international development: Shared Space and the New Nonprofit Workplace China Brotsky, Sarah Mendelson Eisinger, Diane Vinokur-Kaplan, 2019 In response to rising real-estate costs and positive trends toward collaboration in the nonprofit sector, Shared Space and the New Nonprofit Workplace presents a comprehensive overview of shared space as an innovative model and effective long-term solution for nonprofit organizations' need for stable and affordable office and program space. With the help of 15 case studies, the text provides a practical roadmap to develop these new workspaces; documents benefits to nonprofit staff, organizations, and their communities; and presents challenges and solutions at successful nonprofit shared spaces, the history of nonprofit centers, and future trends.

posner center for international development: International Energy and Poverty Lakshman Guruswamy, 2015-08-20 Around 2.8 billion people globally, also known as the Other Third or energy poor, have little or no access to beneficial energy that meets their needs for cooking, heating, water, sanitation, illumination, transportation, or basic mechanical power. This book uniquely integrates the hitherto segmented and fragmented approaches to the challenge of access to energy. It provides theoretical, philosophical and practical analysis of energy for the low energy (non-hydrocarbon based) Other Third of the world, and how the unmet needs of the energy poor might be satisfied. It comprehensively addresses the range of issues relating to energy justice and energy access for all, including affordable - sustainable energy technologies (ASETs). The book breaks new ground by crafting a unified and cohesive framework for analysis and action that explains the factual and socio-political phenomenon of the energy poor, and demonstrates why clean energy is a primary determinant of their human progress. This is a must-read for all scholars, students, professionals and policy makers working on energy policy, poverty, and sustainable energy technologies.

posner center for international development: Decolonize, Humxnize Kathryn Toure, Roopal Thaker, Rama Dieng, 2024-02-24 Whose knowledge counts? Why delve deep to understand self, history and intercontinental relations? How do people and communities heal from the wounds of colonization and related trauma passed from generation to generation? Such intractable questions are explored in this collection of essays on decolonization. To decolonize means to humxnize, which is of even greater urgency in the 21 st century with colonization showing itself in new forms. Perspectives from several continents suggest pathways toward more convivial and equitable relations in society, and each chapter is presented in conversation with an illustration. The book will inspire young leaders, educators, activists, policymakers, researchers, and anyone resisting colonization and its effects and working for a kinder, gentler world. These 13 instructive and sometimes personal chapters speak to the urgency of decolonization, building on a culture of ubuntu or recognizing oneself in others. – François-Joseph Azoh, Psychologist, Lecturer at Ecole Normale Supérieure of Abidjan, Cote d'Ivoire Connections between colonization, racism, and other "isms" are addressed, as are rehumxnizing intercontinental movements such as Black Lives Matter, #MeToo, and #RhodesMustFall. – Dr. Wanja Njuguna, Senior Lecturer, Journalism and Media Technology, Namibia University of Science and Technology Embrace this read and learn how we humXns are the X-factor in the liberation from mental and physical bondage. – Larry Lester, activist and President of the Greater Kansas City Black History Study Group, a branch of ASALH Decolonization brings a progressive transformation of the world. – Therese Mungah Shalo Tchombe, Emeritus Professor/Honorary Dean of Education, University of Buea, Cameroon posner center for international development: The Implementation Game Carolyn Deere, 2011-06-16 With the launch of the World Trade Organization (WTO) in 1995, its Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS) emerged as a symbol of coercion in international economic relations. In the decade that followed, intellectual property became one of the most contentious topics of global policy debate. This book is the first full-length study of the politics surrounding what developing countries did to implement TRIPS and why. Based on a review of the evidence from 1995 to 2007, this book emphasises that developing countries exhibited considerable variation in their approach to TRIPS implementation. In particular, developing countries took varying degrees of advantage of the legal safeguards and options-commonly known as TRIPS 'flexibilities'-that the Agreement provides. To explain this variation, this book argues that TRIPS implementation must be understood as a complex political game played out among developing country governments and a range of stakeholders-developed countries, non-governmental organisations (NGOs), intergovernmental organisations (IGOs), and industry groups. The contested nature of the TRIPS bargain spurred competing efforts to revise the terms of TRIPS and to influence global IP regulation more broadly. The intensity of the implementation game was amplified by an awareness among the various stakeholders that the IP reforms developing countries pursued would influence these ongoing international negotiations. The book attributes the variation in TRIPS implementation to the interplay between these global IP debates, international power pressures, and political dynamics within developing countries. The book includes historical analysis, compilations of evidence, and analysis supported by examples from across the developing world. The Implementation Game will be of interest both to scholars of international relations, law, and international political economy as well as to policymakers, commentators, and activists engaged in debates on the global governance of intellectual property.

posner center for international development: Globalization Jan-Erik Lane, 2017-07-05 Efforts at coordination between nations are at the heart of the challenges of globalization. Despite steadily growing interdependencies, individual nations still have specific interests that present obstacles to globalization. While some challenges inspired by the need to coordinate are viewed as inevitable by many, they are less optimistic about prospects for success. Jan-Erik Lane argues that one should focus objectively upon the possibility of failures. Lane analyzes four kinds of challenges to interdependency, all of which are growing in geopolitical relevance. First, countries need to diminish their dependency on fossil fuel and shift to a reliable supply of energy, because fossil fuels are diminishing. Second, environmental degradation must be addressed, because it is accelerating under the strain of earth's population. Lane advocates an ecological footprint approach. Third, a single global market economy and its complexities must be addressed, as national economies are increasingly opened. Finally, as traditional state sovereignty weakens, foreign military intervention in both international and intra-state conflicts increases. Governments are attempting to address these interdependencies, or reply to the challenges they pose, mainly through international organizations and regionalism. These efforts are discussed at length. In addition, problems with international law are reviewed, as Lane warns against the utopian hopes of global constitutionalism. Globalization also examines the potential consequences of failing to address the need for coordination in efforts to address shared global challenges.

posner center for international development: Statebuilding and Intervention David Chandler, 2014-05 This edited book sets out and engages with some of the key policies, practices and paradigms of external intervention in the case of state support and reconstruction. Many assumptions about statebuilding have been reconsidered in the wake of Iraq, and ongoing problems in other states such as Afghanistan, Bosnia and Kosovo. Rather than being a regional survey or a policy-orientated 'lessons learned' book, this collection explores the broader framing of policy goals, statebuilding practices and the consensus on the need for Western states and international institutions to be engaged in this policy area. The volume is divided into three parts: the first engages with some of the key policy frameworks and conceptual issues raised by recent statebuilding interventions; the second considers core statebuilding practices; and the third reconsiders statebuilding paradigms more broadly. The essays open up debate and critical discussion in the field at a time when many advocates of extending statebuilding intervention suggest that the complex nature of the problems of non-Western states and societies mean that it will inevitably be contradictory and limited in its results.

In Reconsidering REDD+: Authority, Power and Law in the Green Economy, Julia Dehm provides a critical analysis of how the Reducing Emissions from Deforestation and Forest Degradation (REDD+) scheme operates to reorganise social relations and to establish new forms of global authority over forests in the Global South, in ways that benefit the interests of some actors while further marginalising others. In accessible prose that draws on interdisciplinary insights, Dehm demonstrates how, through the creation of new legal relations, including property rights and contractual obligations, new forms of transnational authority over forested areas in the Global South are being constituted. This important work should be read by anyone interested in a critical analysis of international climate law and policy that offers insights into questions of political economy, power, and unequal authority.

posner center for international development: Hiding in Plain Sight Eric Stover, Victor Peskin, Alexa Koenig, 2016 Hiding in Plain Sight tells the story of the global effort to apprehend the world's most wanted fugitives. Beginning with the flight of tens of thousands of Nazi war criminals and their collaborators after World War II, then moving on to the question of justice following the recent Balkan wars and the Rwandan genocide, and ending with the establishment of the International Criminal Court and America's pursuit of suspected terrorists in the aftermath of 9/11, the book explores the range of diplomatic and military strategies--both successful and unsuccessful--that states and international courts have adopted to pursue and capture war crimes suspects. It is a story fraught with broken promises, backroom politics, ethical dilemmas, and daring escapades--all in the name of international justice and human rights. Hiding in Plain Sight is a companion book to the public television documentary Dead Reckoning: Postwar Justice from World War II to The War on Terror.
