generalization of rough set. As covering rough set is a mathematical tool to deal with incomplete and incomplete data, it has been widely used in various fields. The aim of this paper is to extend the covering rough sets to interval neutrosophic sets, which can make multi-attribute decision making problem more tractable. Interval neutrosophic covering rough sets can be viewed as the bridge connecting Interval neutrosophic sets and covering rough sets. Firstly, the paper introduces the definition of interval neutrosophic sets and covering rough sets, where the covering rough set is defined by neighborhood. Secondly, Some basic properties and operation rules of interval neutrosophic sets and covering rough sets are discussed. Thirdly, the definition of interval neutrosophic covering rough sets are proposed. Then, some theorems are put forward and their proofs of interval neutrosophic covering rough sets also be given. Lastly, this paper gives a numerical example to apply the interval neutrosophic covering rough sets.

tang jun sang relationships: Exploring prevention strategies and treatment in addictive disorders Cristina Núñez, Sandra Montagud Romero, Francisco Jose Fernandez Gomez, Victoria Gomez-Murcia, 2025-02-28 Drug addiction is a chronic psychiatric disorder characterized by escalating compulsive drug-seeking and drug-using behaviors and by recurrent relapses, constituting a major socioeconomic burden to society. Several brain regions and neurocircuits have been shown to play important roles in addiction-related behavioral alterations. Initially, abused substances activate the reward system leading to pleasurable effects that reinforce their consumption. When drug intake is repeated, these drug rewarding effects gradually diminish while the aversive emotional state that arises in addicts when the abused compound is absent, which is prompted by the stimulation of the antireward brain system, provokes the subsistence of drug use. Eventually, drug intake becomes compulsive due to a loss of self-control over behavior. In addition, relapse in drug use is a common feature of this disorder. Among the factors that contribute to the vulnerability to enter the addiction cycle as well as to the reinstatement of drug-seeking behavior are genes, stress, and environmental or conditioning factors. Regardless of more than 70 years of research, the cellular and molecular alterations elicited by addictive drugs in the brain and their consequences in the organization of neurocircuits are not fully understood. The initial exposure to the drug is essential for the development of the addictive disorder. Nonetheless, only a low percentage of the population that ever uses drugs becomes an addict, highlighting the relevant role of the interactions between addictive compounds and the biological or environmental risk factors. Besides, the rate of relapses in drug use has remained stable for the last four decades. Hence, a deeper knowledge of the molecular and cellular processes underpinning the addiction cycle will clearly aid to improve the effectiveness of therapeutic strategies to prevent the reinstatement of drug use as well as to develop new psychological and/or pharmacological treatments. The aim of this Research Topic is to progress in the knowledge of the cellular and molecular adaptive changes evoked by drugs of abuse and the risk factors that increase the vulnerability to enter the addiction cycle, as well as to uncover new therapeutic approaches for its treatment. • Vulnerability factors involved in drug use and relapses • Brain cellular and molecular mechanisms underlying the addiction stages • Peripheral alterations induced by abused substances • Psychological, pharmacological, and environmental interventions for the treatment of substance use disorder tang jun sang relationships: The Changing Face of Korean Cinema Brian Yecies, Aegyung Shim, 2015-12-22 The rapid development of Korean cinema during the decades of the 1960s and 2000s reveals a dynamic cinematic history which runs parallel to the nation's political, social, economic and cultural transformation during these formative periods. This book examines the ways in which South Korean cinema has undergone a transformation from an antiquated local industry in the 1960s into a thriving international cinema in the 21st century. It investigates the circumstances that allowed these two eras to emerge as creative watersheds, and demonstrates the forces behind Korea's positioning of itself as an important contributor to regional and global culture, and especially its interplay with Japan, Greater China, and the United States. Beginning with an explanation of the understudied operations of the film industry during its 1960s take-off, it then offers insight into the challenges that producers, directors, and policy makers faced in the 1970s and 1980s during the most volatile part of Park Chung-hee's authoritarian rule and the subsequent Chun Doo-hwan military government. It moves on to explore the film industry's professionalization in the 1990s and subsequent international expansion in the 2000s. In doing so, it explores the nexus and tensions between film policy, producing, directing, genre, and the internationalization of Korean cinema over half a century. By highlighting the recent transnational turn in national cinemas, this book underscores the impact of developments pioneered by Korean cinema on the transformation of 'Planet Hallyuwood'. It will be of particular interest to students and scholars of Korean Studies and Film Studies.

tang jun sang relationships: Transtopia in the Sinophone Pacific Howard Chiang, 2021-04-06 As a broad category of identity, "transgender" has given life to a vibrant field of academic research since the 1990s. Yet the Western origins of the field have tended to limit its cross-cultural scope. Howard Chiang proposes a new paradigm for doing transgender history in which geopolitics assumes central importance. Defined as the antidote to transphobia, transtopia challenges a minoritarian view of transgender experience and makes room for the variability of transness on a historical continuum. Against the backdrop of the Sinophone Pacific, Chiang argues that the concept of transgender identity must be rethought beyond a purely Western frame. At the same time, he challenges China-centrism in the study of East Asian gender and sexual configurations. Chiang brings Sinophone studies to bear on trans theory to deconstruct the ways in which sexual normativity and Chinese imperialism have been produced through one another. Grounded in an eclectic range of sources—from the archives of sexology to press reports of intersexuality, films about castration, and records of social activism—this book reorients anti-transphobic inquiry at the crossroads of area studies, medical humanities, and queer theory. Timely and provocative, Transtopia in the Sinophone Pacific highlights the urgency of interdisciplinary knowledge in debates over the promise and future of human diversity.

tang jun sang relationships: The Origins of the Cultural Revolution Roderick MacFarquhar, 1999-11 This is the final volume in a trilogy that examines the politics, personalities, economics, culture, and international relations of China from the mid-1950s to the mid-1960s. It seeks to answer the central question: Why did Chairman Mao Zedong launch the Cultural Revolution (1966-76), which plunged China into chaos and almost destroyed its Communist Party? The Coming of the Cataclysm starts with the great famine of the early 1960s, which resulted in tens of millions of deaths and set in train a series of emergency measures that increasingly divided Mao from his comrades-in-arms. His anger that they were prepared to adopt capitalist methods to rescue the country was sharpened by his belief that Moscow had actually gone capitalist and sold out to the imperialist West. From 1961 to 1966, the period covered by this volume, the increasingly urgent question for Mao was how to prevent a similar revolutionary degeneration in China. The Cultural Revolution was his answer. Drawing upon new evidence from Party documents, personal interviews, books, and journals, MacFarquhar details the growing rift between Mao and his colleagues as they attempted to cope with domestic privation and an increasingly hostile international environment--until the Chairman finally decided to smash the unity of the Yan'an Round Table by unleashing society against the party-state.
